General Comments:

The City of Placentia continues to be severely effected by the economic recession and other local events which have resulted in staffing and resource reductions. Regardless, the City is progressing towards implementation of Housing Element programs through partnerships and other unique methods that take advantage of our diminished financial situation. The suspension of the Placentia Westgate Specific Plan in late 2010 by the City is beneficial in that it focuses the City's efforts to complete its much needed General Plan Update and then move to revision and modernization of the antiquated Zoning Code. These two efforts will greatly enhance the City's ability to implement specific programs and achieve objectives as outlined in the certified Housing Element. While the Specific Plan was the vehicle to achieve many of the objectives, its suspension is not viewed to harm our ability for success due to the necessary completion of the General Plan and Zoning Code updates. More specifically, the General Plan and Zoning Code update is proposed to contain several overlay zones which can be rolled out within the designated Specific Plan area to achieve the objectives of the City's Transit Oriented Development goals and objectives of the Housing Element in a more controlled, and thereby, successful fashion than if the Specific Plan was implemented. The General Plan Update is scheduled to be finished by December 2012, after an environmental process is completed. Staff has identified the land use changes and zone changes for the environmental and traffic modeling reviews.
